

The Modern Voter Nostalgia Archive

The modern voter was a project born out of my love for the Morning Brew newsletter and a passion to keep people participating in our little democracy here in the United States. It really is surprising how many “small” bills get through congress without any mention from larger media outlets. That’s not to say that it was malicious or anything (hopefully) but just got lost in the noise of it all. So I grabbed a few like-minded people who were much better at research and writing than I am, and we set out to make a nice and sweet newsletter that kept me and other readers up to date in the affairs of our government.

I think the best way of seeing if an idea is worth pursuing is by pursuing it with a limit. The project didn’t end up where we wanted it to after about a year and some change, so we shut it down. Here’s some of the examples from what it used to be:

7/19 - 7/22

Sky's the Limit

What a dumb saying that is huh? These stories prove that the sky isn’t the limit at all. Whether it’s physically proving we can go beyond the sky, or my patience going to the moon and back with this Infrastructure bill story I hope you take it easy, stay safe, and enjoy the news.

DISCLAIMER: While this newsletter contains jokes at the expense of political parties and figures, the end goal is to keep you, the reader, informed and happy. We still want to bring you unbiased news, the addition of jokes is so that you are informed and entertained instead of informed and comatose.

Newsletter intro by our writer Owen Walor.

AI Powered Government Updates

Our bot uses OpenAI's GPT-3 model to summarize bills, statements, and 100-page court opinions into a few, simple bullet points.

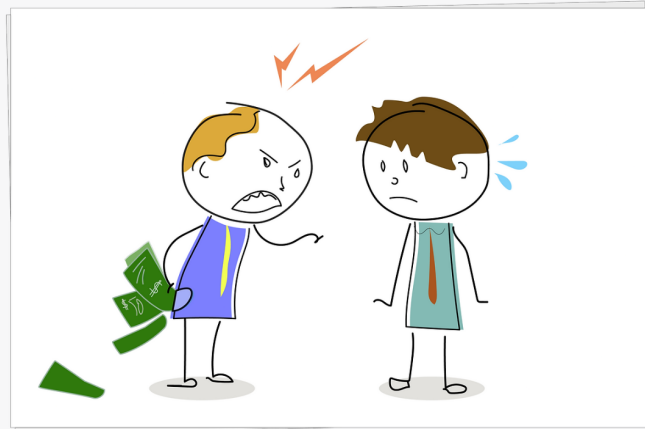

Submit

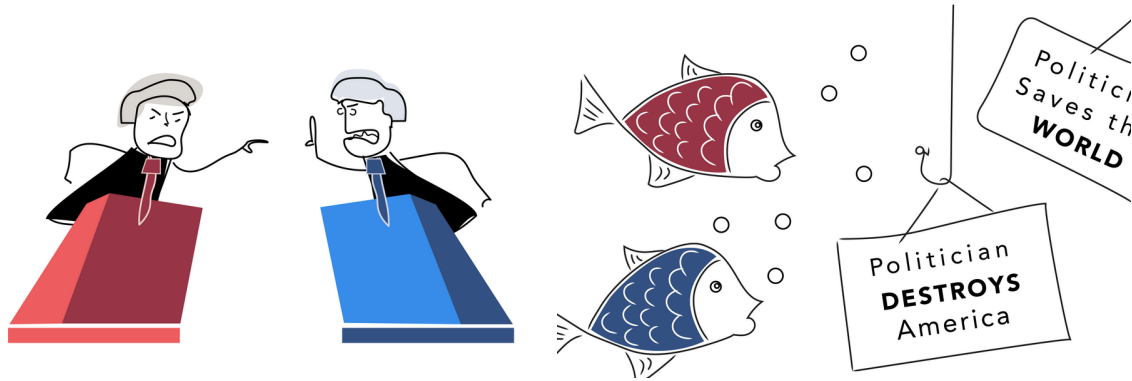

*The site was headed in a different direction by the end of it. Would like to note this was the pre-chatgpt era!!

Our Brains, Not Their Wallets

Our only money comes from the people we care about most, the reader. Sponsors and advertisers aren't a part of our vision of bringing you the most unbiased news we can. Enjoy an informative and entertaining newsletter free of charge, and free of ads.

Some hopeful messaging from our early versions of the site.

Some art that got featured - made with help from my lovely Mom.